

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank the following individuals for their assistance during my studies and the writing of this dissertation:

Professor Pamela Ryan, my supervisor, for her practical guidance and suggestions and her prompt assistance whenever I needed it.

Dawie Malan, the subject librarian for English literature at UNISA and Liz Thompson, the subject librarian for English literature at the University of Namibia for their highly professional work and prompt response to all my information needs.

My colleagues in the English Department at the University of Namibia, for their valuable ideas and encouragement at the times when I felt that I did not have the energy to carry on:: Brian Harlech-Jones, Ismael Mbise, Ernest Klu (all three no longer with us), Laura O'Taala and Helen Vale.

Penny Kandume, my dear friend who kept the home fires burning by standing in for me as mother and housekeeper when I could not manage the time to do so. I would not have been able to complete this work without her dedicated assistance.

Robin, Shimbi and Lu who had to get used to a migrant mother most of the time and a disgruntled one when I was at home. Without their understanding and loving acceptance of the situation I would have been overcome with guilt at the thought of neglecting my children.

And last but not least Trevor, my dear husband, who had to share his bedroom for years with an entire library of books and documents, a computer and other academic trappings. Without his patience, loving endurance (sometimes in the face of very difficult circumstances) and encouragement I would have been lost.

I thank all of you from my heart.
