CHAPTER 2
MOTIVATIONAL THEORIES AND RESILIENCE AS CONSTRUCT

2.1  INTRODUCTION ................................................................. 25
2.2  MOTIVATIONAL THEORIES OF BANDURA AND
SKINNER ................................................................................. 25
  2.2.1  Bandura’s social cognitive theory ................................. 25
  2.2.1.1  Reciprocal interaction ........................................... 25
  2.2.1.2  Bronfenbrenner’s bio-ecological systems theory .... 29
  2.2.1.3  Learning and motivation ......................................... 30
  2.2.1.4  Enactive and vicarious learning ............................... 31
  2.2.2  Bandura’s self-efficacy theory ....................................... 32
  2.2.3  Skinner’s operant conditioning model .......................... 36
2.3  GENERAL PERSPECTIVE ON RESILIENCE ......................... 37
  2.3.1  Introduction ................................................................. 37
  2.3.2  Resilience within the corporate environment ............... 38
2.4  RESILIENCE AS CONSTRUCT ............................................... 40
  2.4.1  Resilience as innate trait or ability of the individual..... 41
  2.4.2  Personality traits of resilient individuals ...................... 42
  2.4.3  Resilience as process ................................................ 44
  2.4.4  Life cycle as a perspective for resilience .................... 45
  2.4.5  Resilience as a systemic construct ......................... 46
  2.4.6  Resilience as a holistic construct ........................... 47
2.5  Parameters and criteria ..................................................... 47
2.6  CONCLUSION ..................................................................... 49

CHAPTER 3
PSYCHO-EDUCATION, ADULT LEARNING AND TEAM
PERFORMANCE WITHIN HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT CONTEXT

3.1  INTRODUCTION ................................................................. 52
3.2  PSYCHO EDUCATION AND TRAINING WITHIN
ORGANISATIONS ................................................................. 52
  3.2.1  Psycho-education ...................................................... 53
  3.2.2  Characteristics of psycho-education ............................ 54
5.2.1.4 Barriers to effective application of individual modules in strengths-focussed training ........................................ 95
5.2.1.5 Barriers to effective participation during strengths-focussed training ........................................................................................................ 96
5.2.1.6 Suggestions to improve implementation of strengths-focussed training in the workplace .......................................................... 97
5.2.1.7 Perceptions of the resilience training programme ........ 97
5.2.1.8 General recommendations ........................................... 99
5.2.2 The effects of implementation of strengths-focussed training ........................................................................................................ 99
  5.2.2.1 Effects on the team ........................................................................ 99
  5.2.2.2 Effects on the individual ................................................................. 101
5.3 CHANGES OBSERVED IN THE PERFORMANCE OF THE TEAM AFTER RESILIENCE TRAINING ........................................ 103
  5.3.1 Initial observation ................................................................. 103
  5.3.2 Follow-up observation ............................................................ 104
  5.3.2.1 Observed effects of the resilience training on the individual within the team .......................................................... 105
  5.3.2.2 Observed effects of resilience training on team performance ................................................................................ 113
5.4 CONCLUSION ............................................................................. 116

CHAPTER SIX CONCLUSIONS, RECOMMENDATIONS AND LIMITATIONS

6.1 INTRODUCTION ........................................................................ 117
6.2 CONCLUSIONS ........................................................................ 117
  6.2.1 General conclusions ............................................................... 118
  6.2.2 Perceptions and experience of strengths-focussed training .......................................................................................... 119
  6.2.3 Effects resulting from implementation of strengths-focussed training ........................................................................... 120
     6.2.3.1 General effects ................................................................. 120
     6.2.3.2 Specific effects on the individual within the team ....... 121
     6.2.3.3 Specific effects on team performance ....................... 123
6.2.4 Implications for Human Resource Development and management ........................................ 125
6.3 RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FURTHER RESEARCH .......... 126
6.4 LIMITATIONS ................................................................. 127
6.5 CONCLUSIONS ................................................................. 127

BIBLIOGRAPHY ..................................................................... 128
ANNEXURES ........................................................................ 139

A: Resilience training programme
B: Permission to record interview
C: Interview protocol
D: Post resilience training follow-up observation questionnaire
