2.5.14 MINISTRY: SOCIAL WORK OF THE CHURCH: CARE OF AGED, POOR, ORPHANS, SICK, PRISONERS, ETC.

Anglicanism may be said to have arrived in South Africa with the first British Governor and garrison in 1795. The first clergymen were chaplains whose work was confined to the men and officers of the garrison and to British civil officials. The first Bishop of Cape Town, Robert Gray, was consecrated in 1847. Two other Bishoprics, Grahamstown and Natal, were created in 1853. The first Bishop of Natal, J.W. Colenso, arrived in 1854. His personality, theology, biblical criticism, missionary policy, and his siding with the Zulus against the Colonial authorities, all contributed to the crisis whose reverberations are felt to this day in South Africa, and indeed in the world-wide Anglican communion. The whole issue of the legal relationship between the Church of England and Anglican churches in other countries was recognised and defined as a result of the Colenso case. The Anglican Church in South Africa became independent of the Church of England in 1870, when the Church of the Province of South Africa (C.P.S.A.) was constituted. However, the Colenso controversy had caused much division, and not all the churches were happy about breaking the ties with England. As a result, the dissentient churches formed a separate organisation which came to be known as the Church of England in South Africa. The schism has never been healed. The two churches exist side by side as distinct entities, causing confusion especially to non-Anglicans.
