opinion the book itself is well get up. When the publication was decided upon I thought that it would help forward the struggle.
As it has not been taken up by a good firm of publishers, it would go no further than advertising me a little. For the sake of the struggle it appears to me that the advertising of me should be avoided. However, it is those of me have to abide by the result. I hope that you will dismiss the whole subject from your mind.
Yet, I know full well what a tremendous strain the struggle must put upon you. Every week I read J. B. shows me more and more what amount of work you are putting in. And this perhaps is the last
