DECLARATION

I declare that Making meaning in anticipatory mourning: Reflections by caregiving spouses of cancer patients is my own work and that all the sources that I have used or quoted have been indicated and acknowledged by means of complete references.

_________________________  _______________________
Estelle L Esterhuizen          Date
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to dedicate this research to the participants and the experts of meaning-making in anticipatory mourning, namely Elsa, Rieda, Jakkie, Priscilla and Mercy.

My sincere appreciation goes to:

• my supervisor, Dr A F Louw, for his guidance, care and support;
• my co-supervisor, Dr M J Manala, for his valuable input;
• Idette Noomé for proofreading and editing;
• my mother, Bridgid, Susan and Lizelle for their input; and
• my precious family for their love, support and patience.
ABSTRACT

This insider research journey explores the meaning-making processes of female spousal caregivers in anticipatory mourning and the knowledges which they have gained in retrospect. The research traces the social constructions of meaning and how they influence the process of meaning-making. A phenomenological study was undertaken in which unstructured interviews were conducted with five bereaved participants, highlighting the unique way in which each woman made meaning of loss in anticipatory mourning. The main phenomenological themes to emerge from their meaning-making were: a) the significance of time; b) challenges and gifts; c) witnessing the decline; d) paradoxes; e) the significance of the spousal relationship; and f) spirituality. The therapeutic effect of telling the life story is explored in this study and the need for contextual pastoral care that is specific to the state of anticipatory mourning is highlighted. Finally, possibilities for co-constructive pastoral care are raised in the light of the research findings.

Key terms:

Anticipatory mourning; bereavement; caregiving; discourses; meaning-making; participative co-construction; pastoral care; social construction; telling and listening; themes of meaning.
CONTENTS

Declaration i
Acknowledgements ii
Abstract iii

CHAPTER 1: INTRODUCTION TO THE JOURNEY 1

1.1 WHERE IT ALL BEGAN 1

1.2 MY STORY 1
1.2.1 The first grieving 2
1.2.1.1 A gift of revival 4
1.2.2 The second grieving 4
1.2.2.1 Gifts 5
1.2.3 Death: a final grieving 5

1.3 MEANING-MAKING: PERSONAL REFLECTIONS 6

1.4 RELEVANCE OF THE STUDY 8

1.5 RESEARCH CURIOSITY 9

1.6 PURPOSE OF THE STUDY 9

1.7 LITERATURE CONTROL IN PREFERENCE TO LITERATURE REVIEW 9

1.8 CONCEPTUALISATION AND LITERATURE CONTROL 10
1.8.1 Caregiving 11
1.8.2 Anticipatory mourning 12
1.8.2.1 The relationship between anticipatory mourning and post-death mourning 13
1.8.3 Bereavement 14
1.8.3.1 Psychological theories of bereavement 15
   a) Sigmund Freud 15
   b) John Bowlby 15
   c) William Worden and Theresa Rando 15
   d) Elisabeth Kübler-Ross 16
   e) Nancy Moos 16
   f) Michael White 16
1.8.3.2 Theological theories of bereavement 17
   a) Zuidgeest 17
   b) McCall 17
   c) W J De Klerk 18
   d) Walters 18
1.8.4 Pastoral counselling – caring for the caregiver 19

1.9 ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS 20

1.10 POSITIONING 21
1.10.1 A Postmodern approach 21
1.10.2 Social Construction 22
1.10.3 Theological orientation 22
1.10.3.1 Feminist theology: towards transforming subjugating practices 23
a) Creating meaning: a re-interpretative perspective 23
b) Death: a revaluation of the dying 24
c) An ethic of care 24
d) Relational meaning with God, self and others 24
e) Empowerment: a deconstruction of religious language 25
f) A revised language of grieving: toward coherent meaning-making 25
g) A critical orientation toward discourses 25
h) A contextual focus on lived experience 26

1.11 RESEARCH PARADIGM 26
1.11.1 A Feminist research perspective 27
1.11.2 Qualitative research 27
1.11.3 Phenomenological research 28
1.11.3.1 The researcher’s voice: an insider perspective 29
1.11.3.2 Phenomenology and social construction: possible discrepancies 29
1.11.4 Participatory action research 30

1.12 RESEARCH PATH 30
1.12.1 Sampling: Inviting the participants 31
1.12.2 The data collection process 32
1.12.3 Interpreting the data 33

1.13 CONCLUSION AND OUTLINE OF THE STUDY 34

CHAPTER 2: THE SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION OF MEANING 35

2.1 INTRODUCTION 35

2.2 SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION 36
2.2.1 Meaning as social interaction 36
2.2.2 Descriptions of meaning 37

2.3 THE SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION OF MEANING-MAKING 38
2.3.1 Meaning-making: a social construct of activity 39
2.3.2 Meaning-making: a social construct of relationality 39
2.3.3 Meaning-making: a social construct of spirituality 40
2.3.4 Meaning-making: a constantly changing process 40
2.3.5 Meaning-making: a fluid language ‘under construction’ 41
2.3.6 Meaning-making as narrative 41
2.3.7 Meaning-making as prescribed by discourse and societal policing 42
2.3.7.1 Medical discourses 43
2.3.7.2 Illness discourses 43
2.3.7.3 Mourning discourses 44
2.3.7.4 Discourses on marriage and gender 44
2.3.7.5 Abnormality discourses 45
2.3.7.6 Religious discourses 46
2.3.8 Meaning-making as a deconstruction of discourse 47
2.3.9 Meaning-making according to cultural and individual values 47
2.4 THE SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION OF MEANING IN THE CONTEXT OF ANTICIPATORY MOURNING

2.4.1 Loss 48
2.4.2 Suffering 49
2.4.3 Spirituality 50
2.4.4 Theodicy 51
2.4.5 Familial and spousal relationships 52
2.4.6 Meaning in caregiving 54
2.4.7 Meaning-making as acceptance of meaninglessness 55
2.4.8 The meaning of an ongoing relationship 56
2.4.9 Coping strategies 56
2.4.10 Rites and rituals 58
2.4.11 Practising death 59

2.5 CONCLUSION 60

CHAPTER 3: MEETING THE CO-RESEARCHERS: THEMES OF MEANING 61

3.1 INTRODUCTION 61

3.2 MEETING THE PARTICIPANTS 61
3.2.1 Elza 61
3.2.2 Priscilla 62
3.2.3 Mercy 63
3.2.4 Rieda 64
3.2.5 Jakkie 64

3.3 THEMES OF MEANING 66
Table 1: Relational themes and sub-themes of meaning 67
3.3.1 The intersection between Social Construction and phenomenology 68
3.3.2 The day the sky came down 69
3.3.3 Silent tears in the toilet 70
3.3.4 ‘Each moment – so precious’ 71
3.3.5 Impotent witness 72
3.3.5.1 ‘He lost his job today’ 73
3.3.5.2 ‘It is just you and me now...’ 73
3.3.5.3 ‘If only you would eat!’ 74
3.3.5.4 ‘I feel so helpless...’ 75
3.3.5.5 ‘Oh God, he suffers so!’ 75
3.3.6 Too busy to think, too tired to mourn 76
3.3.7 Signposts – ‘time is running out’ 77
3.3.7.1 ‘Today he fell in the bathroom’ 78
3.3.7.2 ‘He no longer recognises me’ 78
3.3.7.3 ‘The pain intensifies’ 79
3.3.8 Touching – the warmth of his body 79
3.3.8.1 Rituals of touch 79
3.3.9 Paradoxes 80
3.3.9.1 ‘I wish this were over’ 81
3.3.9.2 Guilt versus ‘I did my best’ 81
3.3.9.3 Loved ones – a comfort and a curse 82
3.3.9.4 Loss of self versus ‘I never knew I could do this!’ 83