I've been trying to get used to the new place.

I'm not used to the new people and the new environment. It's been a bit of a shock.

I've been trying to make new friends, but it's not easy. Everyone here seems so different from where I'm from.

I miss the old days, the familiar faces, the comfort of my own home.

I'm trying to stay positive, but it's not easy. I'm feeling a bit homesick.

I just wish I could be back where I was before.

Last night, I had a dream about home. It was a bit hard to wake up from.

I don't know how much longer I can keep this up. I'm starting to feel a bit overwhelmed.

I'm thinking of writing to you about how I'm doing. It might help to have someone to talk to.

I'll let you know how it goes.

Take care,

Most of the students who will come to the College will be in receipt of various forms of assistance with regard to their educational expenses. It is not expected that all of them will eagerly welcome opportunities of earning something during their College days either during vacation or during term to supplement their financial resources. There are some strong objections to this practice of paying one's way through College. On the other hand, there is much to be said for it by any parent which desires to really inculcate a sense of self-reliance and avoidance of undue dependence upon outside help and of a desire to acquire and retain the life of a college student while at College and to make the life after College in a large established and in a College where life is normal and satisfying be something that provides help prior to and after life is employed. Without wishing to make any general for student to take up such matters, it might be useful to have the dorm rooms for any student who would like to take advantage of such opportunities of adding to their financial resources. It would seem that most would find the life of student who can answer to undertake such duties.
