And he went and brought his dynamite and put the detonator in and fixed the fuse just as he had seen the white men do on the mines. Then he put the dynamite under all of the largest rocks and lit the fuse and then walked back a little way along the path already cut by the third son. It was narrow and on each side were big cliffs of rock just like in Nyikini 200ft where some of you have seen. There was a tremendous roar as the dynamite went off and a great cloud of dust as stones and rocks went flying in all directions. Then the dust cleared alms! What a sight! True the rock under which the dynamite had been put lay in pieces but the explosion had brought down from the cliffs at the sides many more rocks bigger than the one they had broken and the son lay dead underneath the biggest of them all. A lot of the work done by the third son had been useless and the only thing left would be to clean up and patiently to be done all over again. What names would you give these? I think the first one "A nail kambati" the second "I.C.U" and the third Joint Council" for the road. The sons of the people have to travel to reach a better and fuller life is like the work in the story and it is only by methods like those used by the Joint Councils that the Bantu can reach real freedom and peace and joy in South Africa.

"The great importance of its subject matter will take your breath away, if there is a note of irony here and there concerning persons and institutions that the author did not like the graver passages were written with the utmost sincerity. There has been no grubbing in the dirt for obscenity or horror, but nothing has been spared and the author has contributed to be frank without the use of vulgar words. Every word has been written with freedom and truthfulness, and the book has been very cleverly lifted from the most disconcerting state of affairs." (Signed) N.K. Citiisen (Non-de-Guerra)

A LETTER FROM ONE FRIEND TO ANOTHER, BOTH NEW TEACHERS FROM LEBANA.

Dear... During the first week-end of February we paid a visit to Pietersburg and the Diocesan T.C. I was with my fellow teacher who was trained at the College (Diocesean). We started from... on bicycles after school on Friday at 5.00 p.m. It is a distance of 65 miles. We slept at Blood river, a Mission Station near Pietersburg. In the morning we reached town and stayed there until 11.30.
We reached Diocesan at 1.00 p.m. (18 miles from town).
The College is beautifully situated on a hill, and the surroundings have no many trees. After noon we went to see Father Woodfield. He is a very interesting man. I was taken round to see the College. We went round against the classrooms of the Prefecting school and the College. The Classrooms are all beautifully adorned with beautiful sculptures. The boys' bed-rooms are up-to-date and very neat. They use beds. I was specially struck by the adornment of the Church which is beautifully decorated with pictures and carved wood. The students have their tennis courts. The white staff have theirs and the Native-staff theirs also. One for the girls at their department. Three are being prepared for the boys. In the evening we went for prayer in the Church. The girls are well dressed and some of them are very smart. They all use shoes...

We slept in the Boys' bed-rooms on beds, and the sleep was very sound. In the morning we went to church at 7.30 to 8.30 a.m., which was very impressive.

After Service I was taken to the girls' Department by my friend. We were very well received by the girls. They are civilised and they have got European manners, they know how to talk to people. Some two were worth to be admired. These conducted us through the various departments. The girls' bedrooms are excellently arranged. The beds are neatly laid and adorned with all kinds of embroidery work. The flowers planted in the center of the central circle are also adding to the beauty of the yard. We stayed there for a considerably long time. The students there are kept in very good conditions.

We were given plenty of bread and tea for our provision. We turned our backs towards the College very reluctantly.

We left the College at 12 and reached Mr. S's house at 4 p.m., where we slept.

In the morning on Monday we reached here at 7.40 a.m. rather tired but highly delighted with our week-end's excursion.

My visit to the Diocesan Training College was like a Sunshine compared to the dull shade of the life of the place I am teaching. I shall not forget the sunshine of my visit at the Diocesan Training College.

Yours Sincerely /

R.L.U.
